RESEARCH & PRACTICE PARTNERSHIP (RPP)

As part of ICSEC's long-term commitment to strengthening evidence-based education in the Asia-Pacific, we are expanding our Research and Practice Partnership (RPP) network. This initiative bridges the gap between field implementation and academic research through strategic collaborations that generate knowledge, tools, and networks benefiting students, teachers, industry, and policymakers alike.

What is RPP?

The Research and Practice Partnership (RPP) is a living portfolio that includes:

- Field notes capturing real-world implementation challenges and breakthroughs
- Case studies co-authored by practitioners and researchers
- Research briefs translating academic findings for practitioners
- Localized strategies adapted to specific contexts (with guidance for adaptation)
- Cross-country comparative insights to accelerate regional learning

We're Looking For:

- Educators with stories from the classroom
- Researchers with data and analysis to share
- Organizations seeking to document or evaluate their impact
- Policymakers and CS champions keen to learn from peers

ICSEC continues to grow through shared values and meaningful collaboration.

If you're interested in contributing to or collaborating on the RPP, please reach out to us at

Together, let's turn field realities into regional knowledge.
